

October 2022

I was invited to talk on radio – Safm - about what happens when you find you need to change your career. The host and I talk about recognising that it might be time to change your career, how to know when you really do need to change your career, and then how to go about finding the new and right career for yourself.

There are some very interesting callers' comments during the programme. They share their personal experiences.

Click on the below link to hear the podcast. At the beginning the radio host is announcing the line up for the afternoon, so, no you have not clicked the wrong podcast, the topic comes after the lineup has been discussed.
